Among those years, the crypto world is going bigger and bigger.

But we still think that it has some limits.

For example, you can only interact with people in a virtual way.

That is bad.

Since people are born social.

We need communication while we also need physical touch.

Here comes the WeDate, a new platform, built with crypto in mind.

Our mission, is to provide a way, to let people be social not only virtually but also physically in contact with each other.

That's the priority.

In our platform, people could meet as many people as they like. If they think that someone he or she might like. They could just go and say hello.

The ultimate goal is to let people be able to spend cryptocurrency together with those people they love.

Enough explaining, let me introduce my team:

Our team is not big, but also not small, since the main backend job would be taken care by moralis, so all we have to care about is the frontend side.

So our team is made of two frontend programmer, the genius me and another powerful javascript wizard.

In the end, how we go into the market? Well, we don't.

We go famous only if people love us.

The same thing goes into the product.

We success because our user loves us, and embrace us.
